TUESDAY ...... July 23, 1901. CROSBY S. NOYES ...... Editor.

THE EVENING STAR has a regular and permanent Family Circulation much more than the combined circulation of the other Washington dailies. As a News and Advertising Medium it has no competitor.

Iln order to avoid delays, on account of personal absence, letters to THE STAR should not be addressed to any individual connected with the ffice, but simply to THE STAR, or to the Editorial or Business Departments, according to tenor or purpose.

Suffrage Tinkering. When the democrats met at Montgomery and at Bichmond for the purpose of regulating the suffrage of Alabama and Virginia there were hopes of results that would merit general approval. These were largely based upon two men. In the one state was Mr. Morgan, who, although not a member of the constitutional convention, was certain to advise it on so important a matter, and in the other was Mr. Daniel, the most eminent man in Virginia and a member of the Richmond convention. Why should not two lawyers of great ability and statusmen of broad views and large experience be able to propose to their home people a clear and workable plan for the settlement of the most vexed of current difficulties? The expectation was that they would meet the

Both have been heard from, and both have failed. Mr. Morgan's plan, an outline of which first appeared in The Star tended strongly toward the establishment of an oligarchy, with county boards invested with the most dangerous authority. Morewer the drive at the negro was direct in the matter of holding office. The convention was not impressed with it, and in efhas rendered a conspicuous service by condemning the "grandfather clause," which not remedied the defects of his own gen-committee, has reported to the Virginia convention a plan even more complicated provision and a property qualification proision, but it embraces a lot of reservations and specifications which would make the enforcement of the law not only difficult, but dangerous to anything like a fair deal. Partisanship would easily find expression in the preparation of the polling lists, and partisan majorities by manipulating the nature in the Old Dominion would be a fit subject for special investigation. When two men of this caliber-both pure national purpose-fail in this task, who plainer than that success is impossible along the lines laid down by the local prejudices and partisan demands? The real object sought to be accomplished is the violation in spirit of the Constitution of the United States; and every effort to disguise this fact but makes the fact the more conspicuous. It would seem indeed as if the greater the talent employed, the more signal the failure. The old law about ical rights in the south.

Water Waste.

Not until the waste of water annually described in the official reports of those trict is traced specifically to its exact causes will the consumers of Washington be willing to rest content under the charge are recklessly prodigal with the tatistics purporting to show the omparative extravagance of the Washand the approach of the time visible supply will only just e demand are to the point, perhaps, of demonstrating that proportionmore water is taken from the Potomac than the community actually needs. But it does not follow, nor nas it ever been shown, that this excess is due to the wasteful habits of the consumers. Other causes are easily to be found. It is known. for instance, that the government departments are not only large but extravagant asers of the supply, and that waste goes n there without stint or official comment. It is furthermore known that many of the by the roots of trees and the settling of There is no telling how many milthrough the breaks in these pipes. It is not demonstrated that leaky spigots in the houses account for more than a few drops in the whole bucket of waste. The people of the city are not exceptionally reckless in using the water for personal se or for sprinkling lawns or washing They are encouraged to use the supply for this latter purpose, in order ve the good appearance of the parking lawns given over to them by the District for their comfort and for the public benefit. There is nothing to cause least reasonable suspicion that the average Washingtonian bathes more frequently than is necessary or wholesome, or that he is inordinately thirsty. Why, then, this perennial indictment of the residents of the capital as water wasters of high degree? No one will welcome a fair investigation of this subject more eagerly than the persistently maligned householder

Prince Konoye, president of the house of peers of Japan, through his organ, the Toyo, in making reply to western criticism of Japanese morals, retorts: "We do not make idols of our admirals and generals one day and revile them the next." The reasons advanced to the Commissioners in behalf of the protest of the automobile owners against being required to carry lights on their vehicles are hardly convincing. They are solely of a negative walks, roads, mounds, lakes, groves and character, save that which alleges that the "driver" of an automobile has at present all he can do to manage his machine, without attending to the lights. It is difficult to imagine the electric lamp of a storage battery vehicle or the oll or acetyline burner on a steam vehicle machine adding seriously to the cares of the man at the lever. The estimate that this task increases the responsibility by 25 per cent is palpably open to challenge.

Nor is the assertion convincing that thus far no accident to a pedestrian has occurred possible, so as to utilize the materials to warrant the use of lamps. There is already too much waiting for a disaster to point to a remedy or a safeguard in the public adjustments. The community would

THE EVENING STAR. fortunately for the proposition, the docushow that accidents to the machines have happened, with costly results to the operators. A dog is mentioned as the cause of one of these mishaps, which caused the operator to be incapacitated for weeks. There is no mention of what became of the dog. This is important, for in place of the dog might have been a child. If the unlighted machine runs over glass bottles which cost the owners heavily in tire damage, or animals which cause demoralizing mix-ups, why can they not collide with the unwarned pedestrian?

The same line of argument failed to peruade the authorities, some years ago, that bicycles should be immune from the light regulation. They should fail now to exempt the automatic carriage from the rule of precaution. Even if the owners of these machines consider the lights as surplusage, they are known by experience and commonsense to be at least a balance on the side of safety. And it is the purpose of the police regulations to make the streets safe for the pedestrians, who are heavily in the majority, and whose interests are, therefore, first to be considered. The lights should by all means be required of all vehicles after dark, without discrimination. If an issue exists in this case between the rights of the owners of private vehicles and those which are for public hire, it should be resolved by the inclusion of all kinds of carriages, machines and other means of transportation within the light regulation. The circumstance of ownership has no bearing upon the menace which a vehicle offers after dark to the other occupants of the streets.

Refugees in South Africa.

The British government, it is announced is forming a committee of women to visit the refugee camps in South Africa and report on their condition. It is a praiseworthy step. The actual state fect put it aside. Since then Mr. Morgan of affairs ought to be known, and if anything, even the least thing, remains to be done to insure the unfortunate inmates has been proposed for adoption, but he has any comfort it may be in the power of the government to provide, the necessary order should be given at once. And the investigation is most properly committed to women. The majority of those confined in the camps in question are women and chilthan that of Mr. Morgan. It has a poll tax dren, and the problem of their care is one upon which women are the best prepared The time has come indeed when the British government needs to inform itself about other than the purely military aspect of affairs in South Africa. It has been a most difficult task to conquer the Boers if county rings for the purpose of creating in arms, but the end of that is fairly in sight. The few thousand who still keep power thus bestowed didn't appear, human the field are tiring, and presently will be helpless. Submission must follow. But then will come the task of building up the devastated sections of the country again. of life, learned in the law, and patriotic of and inviting the confidence and co-operation of the people. So that every act of may hope to succeed? What lesson is kindness and consideration now exhibited toward the non-combatants will be as bread cast upon the waters. The British government will be certain to realize most handsomely on the investment

And the greatest difficulty will come when the time arrives for dispersing the refugees. How shall they then be provided for? It will not do to turn them adrift to shift for themselves. Their homes have been destroyed, and they will have noththe wise child and its father fairly admits ing with which to begin life anew. They of paraphrase now. The sum required will necessarily be large-immeasurably larger indeed than what has been expended in simply feeding and sheltering these people in camps. To help them to a shelter else where again in family groups and make it possible for them to become self-supports ing will call for a very large outlay, but one which every consideration of humanity will make imperative.

That the British flag will in time, and a no distant day, prove to be a blessing to the whole of South Africa is certain. But fiercely contested war has so awfully wrecked. And Boer and Britain must work side by side to make the task com-

The report of Col. Allen on the subject of Potomac Park, reproduced in today's ssue, indicates what a rich opportunity lies at the hand of the landscape artist may be transformed from a level, now covered with the natural vegetation of a few years, into a beautiful park, with lawns, affording rest for thousands and sion is just about to sail for home, having

The corporation sought to secure a strip five hundred feet wide from shore to shore, and it is a fair assumption that it would be more than willing at any time to accept a portion of the park area for storage purposes. If the public improvements are pressed and the character of the park as such clearly established, the chances of a successful bid for such a privilege will grow proportionately less. The government should at the same time see that whatever structure is erected across the park to carry the railway line shall be of a character suited to park conditions, and not an ugly trestle. There is opportunity in this case to create a railroad construction strictly confined within the lines of the present law which, if not an ornament -to the reservation, shall at least not be an eye-sore.

Massachusetts Democrats. the Philadelphia Inquirer.

It is not surprising that the Massachusetts democrats, like their brethren in Ohio, should be willing to permit Mr. Bryan and his famous Chicago platform bryan and his famous Chicago platform to drift down stream and disappear forever from the public sight. The world at large loves an intrepid leader, but cannot be expected always to follow him to defeat. Mr. Towne's recent declaration that free silver was a dead issue in the west, and the reason he gave therefor, constitute in themselves warning enough that Bryanism, whether indorsed at Chicago or St. Louis, or Kansas City, or Lincoln. St. Louis, or Kansas City, or Lincoln, must prove a losing card. It is not only that the people are tired of hearing the subject named. Like Mr. Towne, they know that the financial conditions of the country never were better at a time when the calamity howlers said they would be ruinous. We must do Mr. Bryan the justice to add that he also must be aware of the fact, but what is he to do?

the Indianapolis News. From the Indianapolis News.

A few days in the country—away from the clangor of the city and the broiling heat of the pavements—out in the open fields, with nothing in sight above nearer than the sky and everywhere birds and flowers and shady trees and running brooks and growing crops! Who does not long for that now and then, whatever his condition in life, and however great the comfort in which he spends his days? And then think what it means to puny children who have had no playground but the street or the alley, whose home is a few narrow rooms in a stuffy block or a cottage on which the summer sun beats blisteringly.
